Dear Family,

Please forgive the mass email, but I wanted to write to you all at once because I have big, big news. You all know that I'm a wicked romantic, but this is real life. My Tommy asked me to marry him this morning! Right when my Tommy said I was his Princess, wha-bam! Flashing in front of my eyes was a vision. It was me in a tiered white and pink and lavender gown with tulle fabric, a long train, and elbow gloves. High atop my head was a glittering crown. I just knew when he said Princess that he was my Dashing Knight in Shining Armor. I shudder even now telling you because you all know Disney World is my dream destination. I've visited 27 times and this next time will be for a Disney wedding. I am a Disney Adult Bride-to-Be!

You probably think I should have called right away because the wedding date is only 4 days away and planning a wedding takes enormous effort, but at Disney the magic takes over. I told my Tommy I'm pretty sure that Cinderella's mice know calligraphy and can write invitations with pen and ink. There's no need to plan a menu because the Fairy Godmother can summon a feast to fit the fancy of even the most persnickety person. Lastly, a limo is not required because we can be transported by gallant, galloping horses and a bejeweled carriage. In fact, I'm not sure if we need to plan anything. I think we can just show up.

But rest assured I am working on finishing the guest list. You should all know you are invited to this most Magical Day of Wedding Blissfulness. In addition, I ransacked my closet of pocketbooks and pulled out the Minnie Mouse clutch, the Daisy Duck tote bag, and the Pluto backpack where I keep my Disney autograph books. In my many meetings, I have gathered signatures of my favorite friends. Who shall I invite to the wedding? I've met Mickey, Minnie, Pluto and Donald, Cinderella and most recently the Stepsisters at the Pancake Brawl in the Orlando Octagon hotel. Oh, how to decide?

Here's the details you need to commit to memory: wear pastels, mouse ears are required, memorize the words to "It's A Small World," sparkly clothing encouraged, and no gum chewing! Those who wish to participate in the character parade should pack roller skates. My Tommy and I do not recommend the rental skates from town as they are harder to steer and resulted in the most unfortunate stroller and umbrella incident last year. Good news though, the resulting lawsuit from said collision is almost over and we will allot wedding gifts (cash or Venmo preferred) towards the settlement that is due. Please be generous – the stroller was carrying twins.

In conclusion, we look forward to seeing you all soon. Until then, we wish you sparkly days and firework-filled nights.

Much love,
Madge and Tommy
