

Rewilding with Murray Fisher

Tuesday
May 5
4PM

Join us for an engaging talk with Bedford local Murray Fisher: Chief Naturalist of Plan it Wild

Murray will share how he and his wife, Emily, have transformed nearly half of their property through the practice of rewilding—replacing traditional lawns with native plantings, restoring woodlands, and creating a more balanced, life-supporting landscape. Murray will discuss the practical steps behind this transformation, from reducing mowing and encouraging natural regeneration to introducing native trees and shrubs while maintaining the beauty and function of the land. His work has already welcomed back more than 125 bird species, along with turkeys, hawks, and countless pollinators.

Following the talk, we'll walk over together for a guided visit of Murray's garden to experience these principles in action and see firsthand how a landscape can come alive when given the chance. Register using the QR code or on website: bedfordfreelibrary.org
